ASTM D3985

ASTM F1249

ASTM D3985 and ASTM F1249 are used to measure the oxygen transmission rate (OTR) and water vapor transmission rate (WVTR) of packaging materials. These tests are essential for ensuring the integrity and shelf life of products, particularly those that are sensitive to moisture and oxygen. The OTR test measures the rate at which oxygen gas passes through a material under specific conditions, while the WVTR test measures the rate at which water vapor passes through a material. Both tests are performed using specialized equipment and follow strict protocols to ensure accurate and reproducible results.

The results of these tests are typically expressed in units of cc/m²/day for OTR and g/m²/day for WVTR. These values provide a quantitative measure of the material's barrier properties, allowing manufacturers to select the most appropriate packaging for their products. For example, a material with a low OTR and WVTR would be ideal for protecting sensitive pharmaceuticals or food products from degradation. Conversely, a material with a higher OTR and WVTR might be more suitable for applications where some moisture or oxygen exposure is acceptable.
